

I would like to voice my opinion against allowing LPFM stations to expand their service. I live in a rural area and we do not have much choice of stations to choose from. The only way we can get the type of programming we prefer is via FM translator. Particularly, we listen to the translator station of K-Love, a national Christian broadcasting network. K-Love is the only option we have for family friendly radio listening. Each of the other stations we can receive allow songs and conversations that I do not want my children to be exposed to. K-Love provides quality programming because of its national support. It is not tied to a specific denomination, but presents a broad spectrum of Christian music, news & issues. A local LPFM station would not have this broad basis of support.

Thank you.
